Archaeologists in Egypt have discovered a huge cemetery hidden under the sands south of Cairo. The 2,000-year-old necropolis was found south of Egypt's capital in the Nile Valley city of Minya. The word necropolis is from ancient Greek and means "city of the dead". The necropolis contains thousands of artifacts, including coffins and statues. Archaeologists started excavation work on the site late last year. They found tombs belonging to priests of Thoth who was the ancient god of the moon and wisdom. Thoth was also believed to be the inventor of writing. Egypt's Antiquities Minister, Khaled alAnani, said that they will need at least five years to work on the necropolis, and that that was only the beginning of a new discovery.

Mostafa Waziri, the head of the archaeological dig, explained that he was very excited about the contents of the site. He said he and his colleagues have uncovered eight tombs so far and expects many more to be found soon. The tombs contain a wealth of historic treasures. One tomb, for example, includes more than 1,000 statues and four pottery jars that contain the remains of the internal organs of important ancient Egyptians. Mr Waziri also said there were 40 sarcophagi. A sarcophagus is a Stone coffin in which dead bodies were placed. Waziri hopes the new site will help to attract more tourists to Egypt. There has been a downturn in tourism since the revolution that took place there in 2011.

Write an essay of 120–150 words on the following subject (5 points):

It is said that travel can teach us a lot. What can we learn by travelling to other countries? Should we explore our own countries first? Explain your view and give examples from your own experience.

I think that any topic related with traveling to other countries is a controversial issue. I know many people with different opinions and it is very important that we respect the ideas of the others.

Firstly, I think that traveling opens your mind, even if you only travel inside your own country, because the purpose of visiting another place is not only to see a different place, it is also about knowing the things that make that place special or unique. It can show you another way of life, traditions, only a few kilometres away from your own home.

Secondly, I think it is important that we travel abroad, but that we also explore our own country too, because you can have true wonders inside your own borders, that you shouldn't miss.

To sum up, my opinion is that traveling is very important in order to know people and to open your own mind
